Leveraging New Opportunities, Advancing Regional Stability

The Asian Financial Forum 2007 is the first event of its kind to be hosted in this region. Co-organised by the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government and the Hong Kong Trade Development Council, this Forum brings together the most influential and respected members of the global financial community to discuss developments and trends in the dynamic Asian markets, highlighting the opportunities emerging from the strong economic growth in the Asian region and challenges of increasing financial sophistication as a result of globalisation.

It is an invitation-only event and limited to 600 named individuals including institutional investors, financial service providers and high-growth corporates.

The Forum combines a half-day plenary conference with three concurrent panel sessions in the afternoon. With a special focus on opportunities in Mainland China and Asia, these interactive sessions address asset and wealth management business, corporate fundraising options, and Asian treasury and bond markets.

Ample networking opportunities will be available over lunch.

The following three concurrent panels in different themes will be held.

Panel 1: Investing in Asian Growth

Asia is experiencing an investment revolution. New wealth, increased market openness, higher standards of corporate governance and rising regulatory standards are creating an attractive proposition for global investors. Increased capital flows from the Mainland China, prompted by Qualified Domestic Institutional Investor Scheme, are creating a substantial and growing pool of new money for investment managers. China's growing entrepreneurial success stories are fuelling demand for venture capital and hedge fund investment products. This session looks at how fund managers and administrators can capture and channel these new capital flows.

Discussion topics:

- Trends in the global fund industry and how to foster and capitalise on the growth in Asian fund industry
- Insight on management and investment strategies of China's national social security fund

Panel 2: Asian Treasury and Bond Markets – Where to?

Asia's treasury and bond markets, which have long paled in comparison to those in North America and Western Europe, are coming of age. New investment options, including Renminbi denominated bonds issued in Hong Kong, are offering investors more diversified ways to take positions in credit risks and domestic currencies in the region. The recent policy of the Mainland China to encourage capital outflows, on the other hand, is bringing opportunities by creating new demand for local currency bonds in the region. Regional cooperation initiated by the public sector in Asia, as seen in the successful launches of a series of exchange-traded bond funds, is also strengthening investor confidence and interest in Asian bonds. This session examines regional trends and the impact of increased capital flows from the Mainland China, while assessing the future potential of treasuries and bonds.

Discussion topics:

- Market development and financial innovation in Asian bond and treasury markets
- Investment strategies in the Asian bond and treasury markets
- Development of treasury products and services to meet new market demands, arising from China's financial liberalisation and capital outflows
- Issue of RMB-denominated and foreign currency bonds
- Ways to develop and deepen financial cooperation in Asian bond and treasury markets

Panel 3: Asia – The Next Global Fundraising Hub

In 2006, companies raised almost US$43 billion via initial public offerings in Hong Kong, making it the world's second largest fundraising centre. The city's venture capital market was equally buoyant, with more than US$40 billion under management. Hong Kong's meteoric rise as a fundraising giant is overwhelmingly driven by Mainland China companies looking to expand globally via the city's transparent, highly liquid and well-regulated financial markets. For those considering the idea of raising funds, or investors seeking to leverage on listed companies, this session will provide valuable information on the latest trends and outlook for growth in fundraising activities in the region.

Discussion topics:

- A global investment bank's perspective of the advantages and potential of Asia as a new fundraising hub
- Fundraising experience of the world's largest initial public offering
- Investment banking and financial services business in the Mainland - experience of the first joint venture investment bank in China
- Growth and fundraising strategy of Mainland state-owned enterprises
- Factors contributing to Asia becoming the next global fundraising hub : spectacular economic growth, high savings rate and substantial fund inflows
- Private equity and venture capital investment opportunities in Asia and China in particular
